The University of Wisconsin-Madison, the flagship institution within the University of Wisconsin System, is a major land-grant research university committed to excellence in teaching, research and public service. The institution manages revenues of approximately $3 billion, has a student body of approximately 43,000 and has more than 20,000 employees, including about 2,200 faculty and 12,500 staff, plus 5,000 graduate assistants and 7,000 student employees.

The UW-Madison is a member of the Big Ten Academic Alliance, and a founding member of the Center for Research Libraries, the Association of Research Libraries, and the HathiTrust Digital Repository, among many other prestigious higher education organizations. The University of Wisconsin-Madison Libraries comprise one of the largest public university library systems in the United States. UW-Madison Libraries is currently engaged in innovative facilities master planning work that will inform campus planning and decisions about future library spaces and services. Library services are currently decentralized and coordinated through the leadership of the General Library System, which provides technical infrastructure, support for collections and acquisitions, and coordination of campus library services with significant efforts underway to transform the library's physical spaces to support evolving needs around teaching, learning and research.

The General Library System presently administers sixteen libraries (Memorial, College, Steenbock, Business, Art, Astronomy, Chemistry, Engineering, Math, Physics, Geology, Geography, Social Work, Music, Social Science Reference Library, and UW Archives). The Special Collections of the UW-Madison Libraries feature one of the nation's leading collections for the history of science and medicine, including strong holdings for chemistry, science and religion, and optics and ophthalmology. The health sciences, law, and education libraries report to their respective deans. The Wisconsin Historical Society Library and Archives is an important campus partner providing the university and the State with access to one of the nation's finest North American history collections.

The General Library System has a budget of more than $24.7 million with approximately $11 million dedicated to collections. The overall campus libraries' collection budget is nearly $13 million. The GLS involves approximately 220 full time employees and its physical collections are among the largest in the country with more than ten million volumes. The UW-Madison Libraries ranks in the top tier in resource sharing, interlibrary loan, article delivery services and in-library usage of library resources and facilities (with nearly 4 million visitors annually). For more information, see: www.library.wisc.edu

The Libraries at the University of Wisconsin-Madison are dedicated to the practices of social justice, diversity, equality, and respect among our staff, students, collections, and services. We strive to overcome historical and divisive biases in our society and embrace diverse points of view as assets to the fabric of our community. All positions will be called on to contribute to building this environment.
